It's a fact: people are walking less than they previously did. That's bad news on many fronts, as walking is a great way to combat obesity, traffic congestion, pollution and a host of preventable diseases.

Research shows that people are more likely to walk in liveable places – where safe neighbourhoods support health and wellbeing and encourage a sense of community.

Victoria Walks, Australia's leading walking and walkability promotion organisation, challenges civic-minded business, non-government organisations, and councils to join the walking movement.

Worldwide, there is growing momentum around the importance of walking and walkability. Victoria Walks is part of an international movement and a voting member of the International Federation of Pedestrians as well as a proud signatory of the International Charter for Walking. It is leading a walkability revolution in Australia that is changing the way we think about the liveability of our neighbourhoods.

Established in 2009 by VicHealth, Victoria Walks is the recognised expert in walking, walkability and pedestrian orientated design, and walking as it relates to health. It is the go-to authority to organisations, businesses and government agencies wanting the walking perspective. As a vocal lobbyist for walkability, Victoria Walks is well networked at the highest levels of government, industry and business.

The opportunity to align your organisation with Victoria Walks is open to all councils, businesses and community groups that aspire to promote happier, healthier, safer, stronger and more sustainable communities.

If you design communities for automobiles, you get more automobiles. If you design them for people, you get walkable, liveable communities.
